

New Jersey's "Do Not Call" law is working, and you should not interfere with it. Phone owners want protection from nuisance calls that disrupt our meals, our work, our families, our sleep, our lives. Telemarketers want the right to use the phones that we own to steal our time. They should have to get permission to do that! The federal law should be tougher, New Jersey's law shouldn't be weaker. I thought the Republicans wanted the states to be able to make their own laws, or is that only when they protect big business, not when they protect citizens?
